

Shining Star German Shorthair Pointer, the next time you look to the sky and you see so many stars, think about how the brightest star stands out. I would have to say Ed and Emily have done just that with their GSP's and training program.

The breed is completely new to me, however, my fiancé grew up with them. She searched many breeders and it was Ed and Emily that out shined all of the others. I can tell you our first meeting with Ed and Emily was different. He wasn't in a hurry to make a sale or show you how special his dogs truly are. Instead, he was looking for someone who would be a fit to a very special breed of dog and provide all the dog needed mentally, physically and emotionally. We spoke with Ed for about an hour before we were allowed to see his GSP's, yes, I said allowed.

What I have found since our first meeting is that the GSP's as a whole are a wonderful breed and who can resist such a wonderful animal? What Ed and Emily do is not limited to selling or training GSP's, they also teach the owner. You may be an experienced GSP owner, such as my fiancé, or new, like myself. There will always be questions and Ed has the answers or can find them.

I have found what is important to Ed is not your personal goals for your dog, but what is right for your dog. What's important is your GSP enjoys what it is doing no matter what level that may be. Ed will make sure that your GSP performs at its fullest individual potential and nothing less. It is always the well-being of the GSP that comes first for Ed and Emily and that shows great integrity.

Luna has turned out to be an amazing GSP! She has surpassed my every expectation. Her personality and intelligence is beyond that of any dog I have ever had, her antics have even lead to her own Facebook followers among other GSP owners. You can see she is always thinking and planning. We recently had Ed run her in the NAVHDA Natural Abilities test and she received a perfect score, one of many steps on our journey together.

We currently own two GSP's. Luna, we purchased from Ed, and Kiji, we purchased from another family. We had planned on purchasing another GSP from Ed and hadn't planned on purchasing another GSP yet, but, we fell in love with Kiji. We weren't too concerned about Kiji's hunting potential, we had Luna. We did send Kiji to Ed for training so he could evaluate her and she what she could do. We were not disappointed. Ed was straight forward about her progress and was very impressed. I asked if either Luna or Kiji could be a Master Hunter. He said, at that time, of the two Kiji would be a better candidate then Luna. This is pure honesty on his part and why I feel you couldn't ask for a better breeder or trainer.

We are looking forward to doing business and hunting with Ed and Emily for years to come. Thank you so very much for all that you do.
